

Community Development
& Health Network

Co-Production

Participants develop their engagement practice to moving towards a model which appreciates the assets of all within communities and how services can be better delivered.

Co-Production Introductory Workshop – short introduction to the values of principles of co-production.

Community Co-Production For Improved Health And Wellbeing – this is a ½ day training which introduces participants to the practice and principles of co-production within a community setting. This is useful to people, volunteers, or group members who are involved in community activities.

Community Co-Production For Improved Health And Wellbeing Within Organisations – this is a full day training for people who are working within communities either as paid workers or statutory employees who are engaging with local communities. This training will be useful to improve co-production within your organisations to improve community health and wellbeing.

