“True community development is about process, not product: the process is very long: and the important thing is not the measurement but values such as equality and anti-discrimination, social justice, collective action, community empowerment and working and learning together.” (Chan and Miller 2013)

This reflective case story template is designed to record the story of change for individuals, organisations, communities and stakeholders who have been involved in community development founded interventions. The reflective element of the template should allow you to critically think through what you have done. It provides space to identify where the strengths and weaknesses of the process have been and to evidence change, where it has happened.

At each stage of the process consider it from these perspectives:

Self

Organisation

Community

Others involved in the process

This will require you to reflect on and discuss the process with those who have been involved.
Reflection

- Background
- Community
- Learning
- Change
- What happened?
- Sharing
- Information Gathering

©CDHN REFLECTIVE CASE STORY TEMPLATE

CONTACT US
- 028 3026 4606
- ruthmurphy@cdhn.org
- facebook.com/cdhnni
- www.cdhn.org